

Pokemon go “hallucinogen like LSD”

on August 18, 2016 in News

“The danger of applying Pokemon Go is given by the abandonment of the boundaries of reality to live a parallel reality. The effect is even more brazen than that of a hangover, we could compare it to a hallucination, in which the person interacts with a real environment, building on a non-shared reality “. Says Margherita Spagnuolo Lobb, director of the Institute of Gestalt psychotherapist HCC Italy, which shares the alarm raised by the bishop of Noto (Syracuse), Monsignor Antonio Stagliano, who considers him “an evil and disturbing play, a totalitarian system like the Nazi” . It announced its readiness to legal action to “preserve social security of men and women.” The psychotherapist compares the app to the spread of LSD in the seventies: “The use of this hallucinogen – he explains – was supported by the idea of humanistic development of human potential. The big difference is that then the hallucinatory experience, while being personal and subjective, was lived in groups, and it was a practice restricted to this reality. the hallucination given by the immersion in the augmented reality GO Pokémon, however, is not a group experience, but individual and personal, and when the player is immersed, has no side no one to protect him from the dangers of the real world. ” “This game – concludes Spagnuolo – unlike LSD, is harmless from a biological point of view, but social: the Pokémon hunters are not weakened by psychotropic substances, have the full possession of his physical faculties, but they no longer the ability to take into account the context of the real limits in which they play. “
